Constantinidis describes her work as a “Nationalist Romantic Texturalism.” A texturalism that reflects the composer’s intention of creating colorful fabrics of sounds representing color spectrums and intensity through sound tapestries. A Nationalism that reflects the composer’s inspiration in Latin American melodic and rhythmic material, as well as geographic and cultural reminiscences. And an overall Romanticism characterized by the use of driving melodic lines charged with emotional energy.

Constantinidis’ most recent work includes 3 commissioned scores for films, a commissioned piece for Marimba and violin premiered at the University of Miami, a commissioned concerto for Harpsichord and Orchestra to be premiered in February 2010, a Suite for cello and piano performed in Prague, Czech Republic and recently recorded, and a collection of Etudes for Cello and Piano recently performed at the Festival of Miami, -Emerging Composers Night- and at the University of Louisiana ‘Composers Series.’ Also, Constantinidis “Macondo Poems,” International Award Winning Piece, was released May 2009 by ERM MEDIA in the recording series MASTERWORKS OF THE NEW ERA vol. 14, now been distributed by NAXOS.
